Having for a long time suffered from the effects of a horrible blood trouble, and after resorting to medical skill and other remedies without benefit, I tried "A. B. C. Alterative." I have been entirely restored, and it affords me pleasure to attest its virtues. It is evidently a very great tonic and alterative, and I recommend any suffering from blood trouble, to try it.

Mr. Edmunds—I make it because I estilieve it.

Mr. Eastis—O, not because its true.

Mr. Edmunds—Also because it is true as 1 believe it. Now, if I make that statement in the senate and to-morrow there appears it. The Record an additional statement that this was accomplished in some way by the senator himself, and that with bloody hands and wicked intentions he had managed by france and violence to construct a legislature of that character, I suppose my friend from Louisiana would say that all that had been said yesterday, and that it was very proper for me, behind his back, to have it inserted in The Record.

I was troubled with Headache, constipation, loss of spirits and weak stomach; but since commencing the use of your Burdock Blood Bitters I bankers and that those were not the words to be use of your Burdock Blood Bitters I bankers additional to find the words to be used to the words to another.

A sentence written out by the official reporter having been read, Mr. Daniels said that those were not the words to be used to the words to another.

Mr. Daniels said that the question was one which addressed itself to the sense of honor of the senate. He had heard the remarks made by the senator from Florida and he did not regard them as coming within the pale of parliamentary privilege. He went further than the senator from Masssachusetts (Mr. Hoar) in his idea of the range of parliamentary privilege of senators.

No senator had a right to point his finger to another and to attribute to him (separating him from his colleagues or from the mass of his political associates anything that would cause him pain or land in Turkestan to a Central Asian anything that would cause him pain or offense. Therefore he did not hesitate to say that the senator from Florida had to say that the senator from Fronta has no right to designate the personality as a person responsible for the crimes and charges imputed to him. The senate, however, should strike at the root of charges imputed to him. The senate however, should strike at the root of such personalities. It was the duty of the presiding officer as soon as he noticed the drift into personalities to call the offending senators to order. call the offending senators to order.

Mr. Gray, a Democratic member of the committee on privileges and elections, defended the action of the committee in reporting the resolution and said that he had supposed it would have been accepted on doth sides as the most orderly and the best considered way of dealing with the subject matter.

The results of the committee of It was not intended, he said, to imply a scintilla of censure on the senator Mr. Pugh, another Democratic member of the committee, concurred in what Mr. Gray had said.

Mr. Hawley, speaking in support of the resolution, quoted remarks made by Thomas H. Benton in 1850, insisting that where anything of a personal character was a like words spoken should stand.

Mr. Evarts, a member of the committee, defended the resolution as reported and said that the senate could not afford to be indifferent to such an interference with the absolute correctness and reliability of The Record. Mr. Vanc, a Democratic member of the committee, also defended the action but said that nothing was further from his intention than to cast any reflection on the senator from Florida.

Mr. Call submitted some remarks in his own vindication and quoted some of Mr. Chandler's expressions in the same debate, imputing to him the possibility of provoking homicide and alluding to "the silent of Florida," and assured the senate that he had no idea of violating its rules. A vote was then taken and resulted in a vote of yeas, 27; nays, 11—no quorum. Messrs. Gray, Pugh, Turpie and Vance, Democrats, voted in the affirmative. Without disposing of the matter the state of the property of the matter the state of t
